It is rumored that a little unpleasantness is existing between the Champion Company and Jas. Doolley, the coal dealer, which may result in a suit. Doolley, it seems, contracted for two cars of coal, which was delivered at this point, and which he was carting away, when the Champion Company stepped in and took possession. As neither are likely to compromise it looks like it will turn out as we state above.

The Young Men's Hibernia Society have elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Patrick Bolan, President; Daniel Healy, Vice President; W. J. Doolley, Recording Secretary; James J. Doolley, Treasurer; James Nash, Corresponding Secretary; Thomas Walsh, Messenger; John McCurdy, Banner Bearer. The society is in a prosperous condition, and its members have been very active in weekly benefits to its members. The society intends to parade on March 17th, on which occasion they will wear their new uniforms.

BELLEVUE, KY. Firemen's debate to-night.

Councilman James L. Ansbaugh is home again. Lookout for Deputy Marshal Joe Dolman to come with a little more wagon.

Mr. Ben. Holmes was in a very low condition last night. His friends expect the worst.

And now a Good Templars' Lodge is talked about here. Enough members to get a charter have already signed their intention of starting one.

Mr. Brown will again lecture at the temperance meeting on Wednesday night. Captain H. H. Covington, and Mrs. Taylor Wells, of Newport, will also address the meeting.

It is not generally known, but it is true nevertheless, that a plot exists at present which will attempt to bring about the election to the city of the upper part of town for Council with the hope of keeping back any improvement sought for by the citizens who don't live so high up. The game was well worked, however, as the people have already signed their intention of starting one.

A few gentlemen who make their headquarters at the Liberty Pole.

CONRAD HOFMAN Shoots Himself While in a Fit of Melancholy.

Saturday night Conrad Hofman, a German about forty-two years of age, who has been rooming for several months on the corner of Sycamore and Court streets, fired two shots from a pistol, while in a water-closet at Vieler's saloon on Vine street, both of which took effect in his left side. He states that he came to this country in 1871, and for some time followed the trade of an artist. Among other things which he made was the plaster cast for the horse in the McPherson monument at Washington. About two years ago he became associated with August Mondheuk in a foundry at 21 Hunt street, but a few weeks ago the partnership was broken off, since which he became down-hearted.

Soon after the tragedy Hofman was taken to the Hospital, where his wounds were pronounced mortal, and it is not now expected that he will survive until to-morrow morning. He talks freely and is conscious that he is about to die.

Mowing Them Down With Napoleon Guns.

National Associated Press to the Star.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 13.—Gen. Crook has sent Lieutenant Shuler, of his staff, to Fort Robinson to investigate the Cheyenne massacre.

FORT ROBINSON, Neb., Jan. 13.—The troops that followed the main trail of the fleeing savages Saturday, found them entrenched in a ravine whose natural defense rendered it almost inaccessible. The Indians had thrown up breastworks, and the troops surrounded them, but the commanding officer, seeing he could not dislodge them without a great sacrifice of his men, sent here for artillery. A twelve-pound Napoleon gun was sent to his aid. This was the situation at the latest report. The soldiers killed were Privates Smith and Good, of Company A, Third Cavalry, and Private Everett, of Company H, Third Cavalry. Corporal Palmer, Company A, and Private Egory, Company C, of the same regiment, are wounded, but not dangerously. Forty savages have been killed, fifteen wounded, and about fifty captured. Among the wounded was a sister of Red Bear. Red Bear shed tears and called her "bad squaw." He returned to his agency, and she remains with the Cheyennes. A relative of Red Cloud was killed. Trouble is apprehended with Spotted Tail's warriors.
